

Michael J. D'Amato, M.D.

Primary care orthopaedics and sports medicine

Dr. D'Amato specializes in the treatment of shoulder and knee injuries, with an emphasis on Sports Medicine Injuries and Arthroscopic procedures, as well as complex shoulder and knee reconstruction. He also is specially trained to care for cartilage and meniscal injuries in the knee.

Dr. D'Amato trained with the team physicians for the New York Jets, New York Rangers, and New York Islanders, as well as the current team doctors for the Chicago Bulls and White Sox. He played football at Harvard University and was a member of the 1987 Ivy League Championship team.

Education and training

Undergraduate degree: Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, Biology

Medical School: State University of New York, 1994

Residency: Orthopaedic Surgery, Lenox Hill Hospital, New York City, New York, 1999

Fellowship: Sports Medicine, Rush University Medical Center

Board certified

American Board of Orthopaedic Surgery

American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgery

Appointments and elected positions

Master instructor, Arthroscopy Association of North America

Faculty instructor, American Orthopaedic Society for Sports Medicine

Thomas B. Quigley Sport Medicine Society

Alpha Omega Alpha Honor Medical Society

Personal

Dr. D'Amato lives in St. Paul with his wife, Kerry, and their son, Michael Jon. His hobbies include golf, cooking, and wine tasting, but most importantly, enjoying time spent with his family.

Licensed

State of Minnesota